DESIGNER STATEMENT:

The objective was to remodel an under-utilized exterior patio at an exclusive resort to become an extension of the existing restaurant. The space was reinvented as a new interior dining space with disappearing glass doors on two sides of the room and skylights to take full advantage of the spectacular views. Complete seating flexibility was mandatory to accommodate either formal dining, a wedding and banquet, or a meeting space, and all chairs had to be stackable and exterior friendly. The designer chose all finishes, wood selections, flooring, furniture, fabrics, color schemes and textures; assisted in the design of the Brise Soleil above the banquette and its lighting and wall finish design; and designed each dining tabletop with a small etching of the mountain for which the room is named. The designer worked closely with both architect and contractor on every detail of both the wine cellar and the dining space.
